Magnolia

THERE is little in the way of change or improvement to note at Magnolia this season save perhaps the important fact that Hesperus avenue has been completed to Magnolia village thereby furnishing a complete and well ordered parallel road to Gloucester through the woods.

This ought to do much, in connection with the fact that city has laid a 12 inch water main from the city thereby duplicating practically the supply, ensuring water in the event of an accident to one of the two mains, for the upbuilding of Magnolia which has lagged somewhat in the building development boom which has characterized other parts of the cape within the past five years.

Especially should it stimulate building from Norman's Woe easterly. On all the entire Cape Ann shore or beyond for that matter there is no property better situated as the sites for summer residences of people of means.

Deeply wooded, fronting Gloucester bay with an outlook over that noble expanse of waters across Eastern Point and across to the horizon, where fishing and pleasure craft are constantly passing, the site is paralleled by but few sections on this coast.

What is retarding operations here? The bad roads have been offered as one reason. But they were no worse than those along the back shore at East Gloucester nor were the conditions bad by comparison. Yet East Gloucester has jumped ahead like a boom town, some of the finest summer properties on the shore being erected there in recent years.

Surely there ought to be building along this area opened up by a good road bed and with an ample supply of the best water in New England at hand. Further it is removed from the hustle of Magnolia center, if there be any objection to that.

The municipal authorities are scrutinizing carefully all measures which might prove detrimental to the interests of this region. This Spring after a determined contest it refused permission for the erection of a large public garage on Norman avenue, although the enterprising proprietor had begun construction. A strong protest was registered by many of the summer property owners.

The season, as befits the war time, promises to be a quiet one. At the Swimming Pool where the society of the section foregathers it is said that the program of festivities will be modified from that of former seasons. Women of

East Gloucester

THERE is no cessation in the popularity of this section among people of discrimination and wealth who are seeking permanent summer homes. This is evidenced in the constantly increasing amount of building operations of the past ten years and is as apparent as ever this Spring. This promises to become more accentuated in the future. The extensive Souther property at Bass Rocks has now been placed on the market. It has been long sought but owing to certain complications which have been removed has not been before offered for sale. Important developments are expected from this one factor alone.

The Annisquam Region

ANNISQUAM this season appears to be coming into its own. Quite a building boom has been going on at Rockholm. Just completed for John Simson of Newton, is one of the most pretentious summer residences here, a two and one-half story house, occupying a slightly position on the Rockholm property. The cost is estimated at $25,000. Louis A. Hawkins of Providence, who has been coming here several seasons, has the plans drawn for the erection of a house of about the same cost, near the Simson residence. William H. Pear of Cambridge, who has been coming here for some years, has also had erected a fine residence on

The Rockport Shore

THE season is opening up satisfactorily and all indications are that it will be successful. Rockport's progress along the summer resort line while not spectacular has been solid and substantial and this process promises to continue steadily.

One of the big assets of this section is the Rockport Country Club which has done much and promises to do more to popularize this stretch of seashore.

The result of an auditor's accounting has recently been issued to the membership and without going into figures, the cheering fact stands out that the club opens the season of 1917 with $95.06 to its credit. To the "excellent work of the Woman's social society" much of this happy outcome is attributed.

In canvassing the situation and the needs of the club, financial and otherwise, the directors say, "We ask you to consider Rockport with the club and Rockport without the club. Is it not worth all and much more than it costs? Also we ask you to compare what you have in this club-house grounds and its location with any other club you know of for a summer club at anywhere near the same cost to establish."

This reasoning is sound. The club is one of the best assets of Rockport as an agency to converting the undeveloped acreage into sites for seashore homes thereby contributing to the taxable valuation, reducing taxes and making possible a higher upkeep of roads and other public facilities.

The Rockport shore is but a continuation of the Eastern Point back shore whose marvellous development within the past ten years has been

There is no question but what the entire stretch of ward one from Mother Ann on the tip end of Eastern Point to Briar Neck or farther along to Cape Hedge at the Rockport line and northerly to the Rocky Neck shore line is to be one of the most important and valuable resorts along the entire North Shore.

Among the additions to the summer residences at Grapevine Cove is that of J. L. Loose of Kansas City, of Sunshine biscuit fame. Mr. Loose with his family came to Magnolia some ten years ago and after several seasons in spying out the land chose the back shore of Eastern Point for a site for his summer home. Here he has had erected after plans by Ezra L. Phillips a $90,000 two-story, stucco residence of the Old English style of architecture which will be occupied this season. A feature is the living room, the Rockholm property. George C. Andrew of Brookline, who purchased the Hall property on Cambridge avenue, divided the structure and has had reconstructed two nice houses for summer residences. Mrs. Lyman H. Crow of Irvington, N. Y., who last season purchased the Davis house on Bridge hill, has had extensive interior and exterior alterations made which stand out noticeably. On Leonard street a two story and a half residence has been built for William H. Ricker from plans of Timothy Holloran architect of Gloucester.

Richard P. O'Reilly of Gloucester has disposed of his three holdings here during the winter. The Colonial house fronting Lobster cove, has been purchased by Edward A. Gokey of Cambridge, and will be used by him as a residence. That adjoining, the "bakehouse," a subject of comment in New England real estate circles. Contributing largely to this has been the Bass Rocks and Eastern Point golf clubs, central social focussing points for the summer residents of that section. Golf, the pronunciation of which was an uncertainty twenty years ago, has become as firmly rooted in the soil as a diversion as baseball itself. The country club with its accompanying golf course is simply a necessity. Without it a given section languishes and has an uncertain life.

The development of the back shore of Eastern Point as a summer residence section will not necessarily stop at the boundary line of Cape Hedge but is bound to overleap it and spread along the Rockport shore line. In addition to the Club there is the factor of new and good roads and the proposed South marginal road

TO ADVERTISERS

THE CAPE ANN SHORE, now in its twenty-first consecutive season, is the only summer resort publication on Cape Ann. It reaches every section of the cape, and is the only means of communication of the kind between the merchants and the summer residents. Therefore its value as an advertising medium is self-evident. It contains each week a full and complete account of the social happenings of the summer resort section. It occupies a place by itself in the advertising field, reaching the most profitable customers along the North Shore. Advertisers should remember these facts.

After the War—Its Effect on Industrial Conditions.

Contrary to expectation, the fact that the third year of the War finds the United States one of the belligerent combatants, has had no appreciable effect on the patronage of seashore resorts.

By the middle of May, notwithstanding the continuous cold weather and a crop of rumors of German U boats appearing off the coast, real estate dealers reported that practically every residence for rental on the Eastern Point shore—exposed more than any other section of the seaboard—had been taken up for the season with the demand still active.

So it has been all along the coastline. Evidently the people from all sections have every faith that the Grand fleet plus the American flotilla now operating in the zone of water around the British Isles are well competent to prevent any German raider of any type from slipping through the barrier. Even if, such should happen to be the case her career would be short lived.

During the first year of the war THE SHORE, after the retreat to the Marne, expressed the opinion that the war would last nearer ten than three years. In August last it expressed the opinion, based upon the successes of the Russian Army under the Grand Duke in the Caucasus, that Constantinople would fall before New Years. At the time the Austrians and Turks were falling back on every side. Then for months came an unaccountable lull. The cause has recently been revealed through the extraordinary developments in Russia which led to a complete cessation of all efforts. Had the Russians maintained their pressure there is no doubt but what the Germans on the Western front would now have been back to the Rhine with peace on terms favorable to the Allies fairly in sight.

Now all military authorities agree that the war will go on three years more. Germany is on the defensive but a nation with its back to the wall dies hard. The Hohenzollerns are now fighting for their dynasty.

There is little likelihood that the war will be brought closely to our shores. It has not been the case in England, hardly 75 miles away from the nearest German base with the exception of sporadic airship raids which accomplish nothing except to stimulate recruiting. Within two years we will have as many million men in the field trained for work at the front and these men will be the deciding factor. The Allies, which were better prepared economically, if not from a military standpoint, than any of the Central Powers save Germany, are feeling the strain. If this is the case how much more severe are conditions in Germany which has had to shoulder from the start a bankrupt Turkey and an enfeebled Austria. With the danger from the U-boats minimized and the sea trade and transportation routes fairly cleared the outcome is merely a matter of time and mathematical calculation.

After the end of this cataclysm it is generally assumed that the United States is in for an industrial boom caused by the increased demand for manufactured goods abroad. THE SHORE, while not pessimistic, does not coincide in this view. Outside ravished Belgium the area actually despoiled by the Germans in France, although important, is comparatively small. France within two months could supply all the industrial machinery needed for the restocking of Belgium's manufacturing establishments. Indeed that process is already under way.

The people taxed to the last sou and kopeck and mortgaged for generations to come will perforce be obliged to economize rigidly. Their power to buy is practically nil. England, France, Spain, Portugal, Italy, the Orient and other countries still continue to maintain trade relations with us as ever. The non-combatants of Germany, their last pfennig gone, have been busy in manufacturing articles for export which have accumulated in great volume ready for flooding the most desirable market—the United States—after the war.

This lack of foreign demand and the offering of goods from Germany and the other Central Powers at very low prices in connection with the fact that the industrial munitions plants which have come into existence to supply the Allies will be forced to turn their attention to the manufactures which must be sold in this country in competition with the products of plants established before the war points irresistibly to one conclusion, an overplus of production which inevitably means lower prices for all commodities. So that the boom just after the Civil war, culminating with Black Friday in 1873 may not be repeated. The finances of Europe after the Thirty Years War were at a very low ebb, the result of the economic exhaustion.

So that to the man who is contemplating building or other improvement the period immediately following the end of the present struggle promises to present much more advantageous prices than have prevailed. Now would seem the opportune time for the purchase of shore acreage for prospective building sites. If all signs do not fail prices of all material, and this may include labor, will be at least 15 per cent. below the present abnormal war conditions. The moral is: If you intend to build a summer home on Cape Ann buy the land now. It is the lowest-priced commodity offering.

The hotels generally opened up last week. Mr. Wilson of the Edward, latest of the hostleries in this section reports the outlook as very encouraging and his opinion is concurred in by all. The weather here as elsewhere is the determining factor.

GLOUCESTER

Behold! my dear old sea-port town,
Walled round with quarries
And the expanse of ocean,
Her crumbling wharves
Piled with the sea-toil of her ships,
The broad, low racks, soon swept of
all their spoils,
And barrels heaped with fish,

The scream of the ferry!
The chattering tackle of ships!
The lumbering carts
The shouts of the men
The flapping of sails
The lapping of waves at the piers
The creak of oars
And high over-head, in the sun
The swift, white flight
Of a thousand snowy gulls!

so called because of its use for that purpose in Colonial times, has been purchased by Mrs. Mary A. Nash of Cambridge who also buys for summer occupancy. Extensive alterations and repairs have been made to both. The third of these properties, the house in Chester Sq., has been purchased by Mrs. Bertram Williams also of Cambridge for a summer home.

The old-time homesteads of the Annisquamers are fast passing away from the natives into the hands of those who buy for summer occupancy. The transition in this respect in recent years has been marked. It is a matter of some regret to note the passing of the native stock who possessed an individuality equal to that of the old-time Marbleheaders. As the years pass their number grows less and some of the families of the settlers will become extinct as far as Squam is concerned.

Some 35 years ago Squam, then a quaint fishing village with its picturesque weather-worn houses and fish sheds, attracted the attention of the artists who found here prolific subjects both of still and human life for their brush. At one time it was stated that more than 100 were domiciled here. With the money that came in from the summer boarder the place was repaired and slicked up with paint and gradually lost much of its old-time quaintness. There were many fine types of the old fishermen who were availed of by the artists and in time they came to a knowledge of their value. A. W. Buhler, who has been coming to Rocky Neck for the past 25 years, tells a story having one of these old fellows for its central figure. Mr. Buhler engaged one of these ancients to pose at a good sum per hour. On his return the next season he made an engagement with his model to resume his labors. The old man, a shrewd type of the Yankee, failed to put in an appearance. The next day Mr. Buhler met him and asked him why he did not show up as agreed. Drawing himself up to his full height he said with much decision: "Buhler, posin's riz; posin's riz!" The old gent thought Mr. Buhler had been making good money out of his paintings representing him as the feature and he wanted a more even division of the spoils.

The yachting season promises to be one of the liveliest on record. A wise move toward intensifying and keeping alive the yachting spirit was in establishing the "dog" and "cat" classes for the kindergarten thereby educating up a new generation to the game. This has worked splendidly and this season there will be still another class along this line. These comprise fifteen one-design knockabout type of boats, built by Nicholas W. Montgomery at Wolf Hill during the winter. These boats, 16 feet in length, will take their names from birds and will be known as the Bird class.

This new class will make the third of a one-design type of boat that is popular on the North Shore and is from the lines of Harry L. Friend, a member of this club, and although not a professional naval architect, has had good success in developing the small boat for afternoon sailing at Annisquam and vicinity.

The boats built and ready for use cost $200 apiece, and many of the new craft will be handled in the races by young women.

No event was more deplored than the destruction of the Surfside hotel some two years ago. Built in 1855 and occupying a commanding position on what is known as Windmill hill, it was a landmark especially when approaching the city from the sea. Its destruction caused a bare spot and something in the building scheme of things seemed wanting.

Consequently when W. Harry Smith of this city conceived the idea of building a hostelry on the site his decision was received with approval on every hand.

The edifice which was constructed from plans drawn by E. L. Phillips of this city is of Colonial design with a gambrel roof effect. It follows substantially the base plan of the old hotel. The outside is painted white with a green roof—a pleasing combination. Inside the open beam construction is used, the color scheme being a warm brown.

On alighting within the port cochere the guest enters the main hall. Directly opposite the entrance is a fire-place which on cool autumn and Spring days will diffuse a welcome warmth to the arriving guest. To the left of the entrance is the office. Leading from that to the left is the dining room, a commodious and well-lighted apartment, furnished in the William and Mary period. The French windows afford an unobstructed view of the unrivalled Gloucester bay. On the seaward side of the house is an ample piazza which on occasion may be used for dining purposes, while on the westerly end is an open piazza of generous proportions serving as a lounge and for similar uses. This opens off the reception and dancing hall in the westerly end. Adjoining this is a woman's resting room.

The service end is located in the southerly side adjoining the dining room and everything has been installed in the way of the latest apparatus in an up-to-date hotel kitchen.

Upstairs are 14 rooms, some of which are connecting, all having a private bath and commanding a fine view of the water. The basement is devoted to the usual storage and utilities service. The driveway and the yard have been improved extensively. Indirect electric fixtures with wall torches of pleasing design furnish the lighting.

Immediately upon its opening several weeks ago it was demonstrated that the proprietor had not overestimated the needs of the motor-ing and traveling public. In spite of adverse weather it immediately attracted a paying patronage which has constantly increased and has come fully up to expectations. There is no question as to the success of the enterprise. The opening several weeks ago was a brilliant affair attended by some 200 of the representative people of the city at which a dinner, cabaret, singing and dancing were the features and the place has come into favor for luncheon and informal dances.

Hester H. Wescott Marries in Yokohama

A letter received from Miyanoshta, Japan, states that Mrs. Hester Hawks Westcott, daughter of the late Edward S. and Amanda S. Hawks, was married May 10 at the American Consulate in Yokohama, to Carl Franklin Rehnberg, a former New Yorker who went to China several years ago in the interests of the Standard Oil Company, but is now connected with the China-American Trading Company, whose main office in the Orient is in Tientsin, China, where the couple will make their home.

The bride was one of the belles of the North Shore summer colony. Her marriage of three years ago to a Mr. Westcott, a cotton broker of New York, was followed in about a year by the accidental death of her husband at Tuxedo.

Mrs. Hawks and her daughter were travelling in Japan this winter, and there met Mr. Rehnberg, an acquaintance of the family of some ten years' standing, the marriage following after a short interval.

The bride's father was a prominent Buffalo attorney, who about twenty-five years ago with his brother, James C., of Detroit, bought largely of the Coffin's or Wingsheek beach property at West Gloucester, their residence being the stone villa near the Essex Loaf, known as Hawksworth Hall.

Directly after the marriage her mother, Mrs. Amanda C. Hawks, left for this country on the Empress of Russia, and after a short stay in New York came to her summer place for the season.

30 by 50, the entire height of the edifice with a gallery in one end suggestive of old English baronial halls.

Mrs. Marjory L. Chase of St. Louis had erected a two-and-one-half story house near Grapevine Cove at a cost of $12,000. Extensive alterations which have completely changed interior and exterior have been made to the Eastern Point residence of John L. Proctor of Brookline, including a long wing. Charles Scott of Overbrook, Penn., has had extensive alterations made to his Bass Rocks home. Edward S. Hyde of Philadelphia who purchased the Robinson house last season has had it materially changed and added to. All these are from designs by E. L. Phillips. The Chandler garage at the head of the harbor, so-called, was built of stucco for E. B. Chandler of Texas whose summer home is East Gloucester.

In the presence of more than 100 relatives and immediate friends of the family, Miss Mary Wendell Greenough, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David S. Greenough of Jamaica Plain, was united in marriage with Donald des Granges at the residence of the bride's parents on the beautiful Greenough estate on South street at high noon June 14th. Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham of the Arlington Street Church officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was gown in the wedding dress in which her grandmother was married, nearly half a century ago, white brocade with a fichu of old lace. The bridal bouquet was of lilies of the valley and orchids, and the veil of tulle. She was attended solely by her chum, Miss Kathryn Jerger of New York, as maid of honor. Miss Jerger was gown in pink tulle over satin and carried pink roses. She is herself the fiancée of William Sabine of Brookline.

The bridegroom was attended by Ambrose H. Burroughs, Jr. of New York, a classmate, as best man. Mr. des Granges is an enlisted member of the 7th United States Engineer's Reserve Corps, and recently received orders to report for service on June 25th at Atlanta, Ga., on account of which the marriage was hastened. He is a well-known architect, in business in Boston and was formerly of Chicago and New York city.

After the ceremony there was a simple reception and wedding breakfast. The guests were present from Brookline, Newton, New York, Chicago, Boston, Jamaica Plain and Cambridge. Numerous beautiful presents were received. At the conclusion of the breakfast the young couple left on a short trip. Mr. des Granges left for the South last week accompanied by his bride.

"Jack" Raymond of Cleveland, Ohio, who with his mother and family have been annual summer residents at East Gloucester, for 20 seasons, became a citizen of Gloucester recently. Mr. Raymond, who a short time ago married Miss Anna Pollard, will reside near the "Ramparts," Eastern Point, having purchased a house at East Gloucester.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wiggin and family, the former a New York artist, are again occupying the D. W. Lyle cottage near the Delphine, for the season.

Mrs. S. A. Raymond of Cleveland, O., is at her summer home, "The Ramparts," Eastern Point, joining her son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Raymond, who preceded them by several weeks.

Bird Class of Yachts Tried Out at Annisquam

Racing was formally opened by the Annisquam Yacht Club this morning for the season, the kindergarten classes only competing. The bird type designed by Harry L. Friend, a club member, had its initial try out in competition and made a good impression. The wind was light, the start being made at 10.15 when the birds were sent away. The wind shifted continuously, giving the new boats a thorough test on all points of sailing.

In this class the Tern got the best of the get-off, with the Cygnet second, Jimmie Cunningham, who sailed Walter Adams' boat, Toucan, third. Down to the lighthouse the wind held south-east, giving a reach, but backed to northerly, compelling a beat to Plum cove. The fight this distance was a very close one between the Toucan and the Arch, the Norton boat with the peculiar name, with the Cygnet third.

On the second leg to Plum cove Capt. Cunningham drew out slightly ahead of his rival, the Arch, the leg being a broad reach. It was run home to the lighthouse when the wind headed the fleet and died down, giving a beat up the channel to the finish. On this leg the Friend boat Squab ran up from the rear and secured second place.

The course for the cat and the dog classes was from the clubhouse to Plum cove and return, some of the boats getting becalmed and failed to show up at the finish. The summary:

The Wetherell Soda Fountain

Last year the demands on the soda dispensing department of the Wetherell Pharmacy in Post-office square became so pronounced that at the commencement of the season a new fountain was put in. This in turn has proved inadequate to the demand upon it and accordingly another fountain, the largest and most approved on the entire North Shore, has been installed in order to give sufficient accommodation to the constantly increasing demand. This is conclusive proof of the growth of what is the largest soda fountain business in this section.

Mr. Wetherell has enlarged his establishment by taking in a rear apartment and refinishing the interior in mahogany the whole making a pleasing combination. This is the oldest pharmacy in the city, established by the father of the present proprietor, who is enhancing the reputation established by its founder.

Lobster Cove, Annisquam

The frontispiece is a view of the upper portion of Lobster Cove just above the bridge and was taken some twenty years ago before any improvements were made.

Annisquam was settled about 1630 by a company from Plymouth under the leadership of Abram Robinson said to be a son of Rev. John Robinson, religious sponsor for the Plymouth colony. They came over to establish a fishing settlement and from that time up to the present that industry has been the principal vocation of the natives although pursued in a small way at present.

Up to twenty-five years ago Annisquam was much like the fishing village of Marblehead, a quaint out-of-the-way locality of weather-beaten homesteads and fish houses. "Discovered" about that time by the numerous tribe of artist they swarmed down on the place and for years Annisquam was noted as one of the most thickly populated summer artist resorts of the country. The foremost of the guild made headquarters at Annisquam. The result was that the natives turned a tidy penny from boarding the artist and the summer sojourner and otherwise ministering to their needs. With prosperity the place was slicked up and lost much of its charm. The view presented on the front page was taken when the place was in its simplicity. That of today would show only the old Colonial houses now owned by summer residents with the smaller structures cleared away. The old cob wharves used for landing fish are still to be seen as in the picture in a state of picturesque decay. In this locality for many years were built the fishing boats used by the natives and the Gloucester fishermen. This was quite an industry up to 1866 when the last fishing vessel was built and launched from these ways.

The large house with the chimney in the center was known as the Tavern in Colonial times.

Near this place during the war of 1812 the inhabitants assembled their fishing craft endeavoring to hide them from the enemy who cruised about the coast and occasionally sent barge loads of soldiers and marines ashore to forage and destroy. Lobster Cove, an arm or fjord that makes in from the inlet known as the "river" was admirably adapted for the purpose. That did not prevent the British raiding parties from penetrating here. However, it is said that they considerably refrained from burning the boats and looting the houses of the inhabitants for two reasons. First, the inhabitants of New England and especially this section had from the first been strongly opposed to the war and had gone on record as against it. Very few enlisted in the army from this section although a number tried the privateering end of the game which was so profitable during the Revolution. Secondly, it was said the inhabitants were so hospitable and entertained the British officers and soldiers so lavishly in the Tavern, the pretty girls for which the village was noted and who officiated as waitresses made such an impression upon the chivalrous Britishers that they spared everything and went on their way, the inhabitants rejoicing and exceeding glad in getting off so easily. These raids (not this especial incident) explains the deep-rooted antagonism of the native New England seaboard people, themselves English by origin, to everything English, a feeling that of late is happily fading away.

Suppose a Hun crew in a submarine were to come ashore on unprotected Squam today and make a similar visitation? Would Squam property and pretty girls get off as easily? Ask the people of Belgium and that part of France overrun by the invader.

The County Club will be, as usual, the focusing point for the social activities which this season will be toned down somewhat in accordance with the war time spirit. A number of the members are away this season engrossed with affairs of the army and navy.

The beautiful strip of woods bordering the road to Essex which was many years ago purchased and dedicated to public use forever, has recently been memorialized by the erection of a plain and very handsome bronze tablet, which is set into the face of a rough boulder on the side of the road in the midst of the large hemlock grove near the entrance to the woods. The tablet is about two feet in length by 18 inches in width and bears the following inscription in plain raised letters:

To the Glory of God and for the Benefit of man
these woods
are preserved
Forever
1879

Through the energetic influence of Mrs. Alice N. Lincoln, a strip of seven rods on each side of the road, for a greater part of the way was secured partly by gift, but mainly by purchase, the sum of $3500 being contributed for the purpose by summer residents in Manchester and Beverly; the whole being deeded with the condition that the woods be preserved forever.

The North Shore Theatre

This Spring a new and up-to-date theatre was completed just below the site of the Olympia theater so well known to the summer colony and was opened to the public several weeks ago.

Nothing known to modern theater construction was omitted to make this theater one of the most complete and artistic of its kind to be found anywhere. It is absolutely fireproof and equipped with the latest and commodious seats. It is built on solid ground and is equipped with a perfect ventilating system whereby the air is completely exhausted every fifteen minutes fresh air replacing that pumped out. By an ingenious device the heating pipes become transformed into a refrigerating system in summer. The decorative scheme, dove color and gold, is restful and artistic and the theater is the subject of much favorable comment. Altogether it furnishes an institution of which the city has some degree of pride.

The manager is Mr. James P. Kincaide who for many years was identified with the Olympia theater in a similar capacity and is well and favorably known to a large circle of summer people. Mr. Kincaide brings with him a thorough knowledge of the wishes and desires of the motion photo patrons of this city and presents only a program of the very best productions offering.

The boxes of the new theater, of which there are quite a number, all command a fine view of the stage and box parties may make engagements in advance by advising the management. The SHORE recommends this theatre to the patronage of the most exacting. Change of program is made three times weekly as will be seen by consulting the advertisement in another column. This is the only theater open to the public in the city. Halfdan Hansen who has designed many of the finest residences along the North Shore was the architect.
